CHARLOTTE SULLIVAN

Did you know there's an academy award for decorative – or faux – painting? It's called the Fauxcademy, which, granted, is a rather silly name for such a prestigious national honor. But, nonetheless, local artist Charlotte Sullivan has won it twice.

Sullivan is an esteemed muralist and decorative painter whose commissions grace homes in Ridgewood, Wyckoff, Glen Rock, Ho-Ho-Kus and Franklin Lakes – and residences and commercial spaces all over New York and New Jersey for that matter. With a bachelor of fine arts from Pratt and a near-lifetime of studying traditional oil painting under esteemed artist John Osborne at the Ridgewood Art Institute – where she's been helping in the classroom for years, too – Sullivan stands out in the now-saturated world of decorative painters.
